

Aged Chinese Wins Marilyn

They say that guys don't make passes at girls who wear glasses, but they're wrong. Even girls make passes at girls who wear glasses.

Take the case of young Marilyn Johnson. She is no Walter Thornton model but she has brilliant blonde hair, sporn himmed rec-tacles—er—rim sporned hectacles—to heck with it! She has horn rimmed spectacles and a figure that is slightly on the lean side, but she found that her requisites were an attraction to both 26-year-old man-nishly dressed Norma Taugher and Louis Luke, a Chinese who must be getting close to his allotted three-score-and-ten.

Norma appears to be the villain in the case as she was charged with assaulting and threatening Marilyn and forcibly entering old Louis' quarters at 63 Centre Street.

According to the blonde, she has been out of work since April and had been living with Louis.

"What did you do for Louis?" asked the court.

"Oh, he kept me," replied Marilyn.

"For nothing?"

"He didn't demand very much," the girl said with a shy smile.

Then she explained that she had met Norma and had gone to live with her. In answer to a Crown question she said they had slept together and then, suddenly, Norma had slapped her and threatened that "nobody will look at you again if you tell the law!"

Well, Louis had never treated her like this, so she packed up her toothbrush and hiked back to Louis' boudoir.

Later, Norma dropped in to get the return of her bedmate and was accused of forcing her way in.

However, when it was all aired out in court, Louis declared he was quite willing to drop the charge as long as Norma kept away from his preserve. Marilyn was in agreement. Norma pouted a little but decided to go along with all suggestions.

All charges were dismissed.

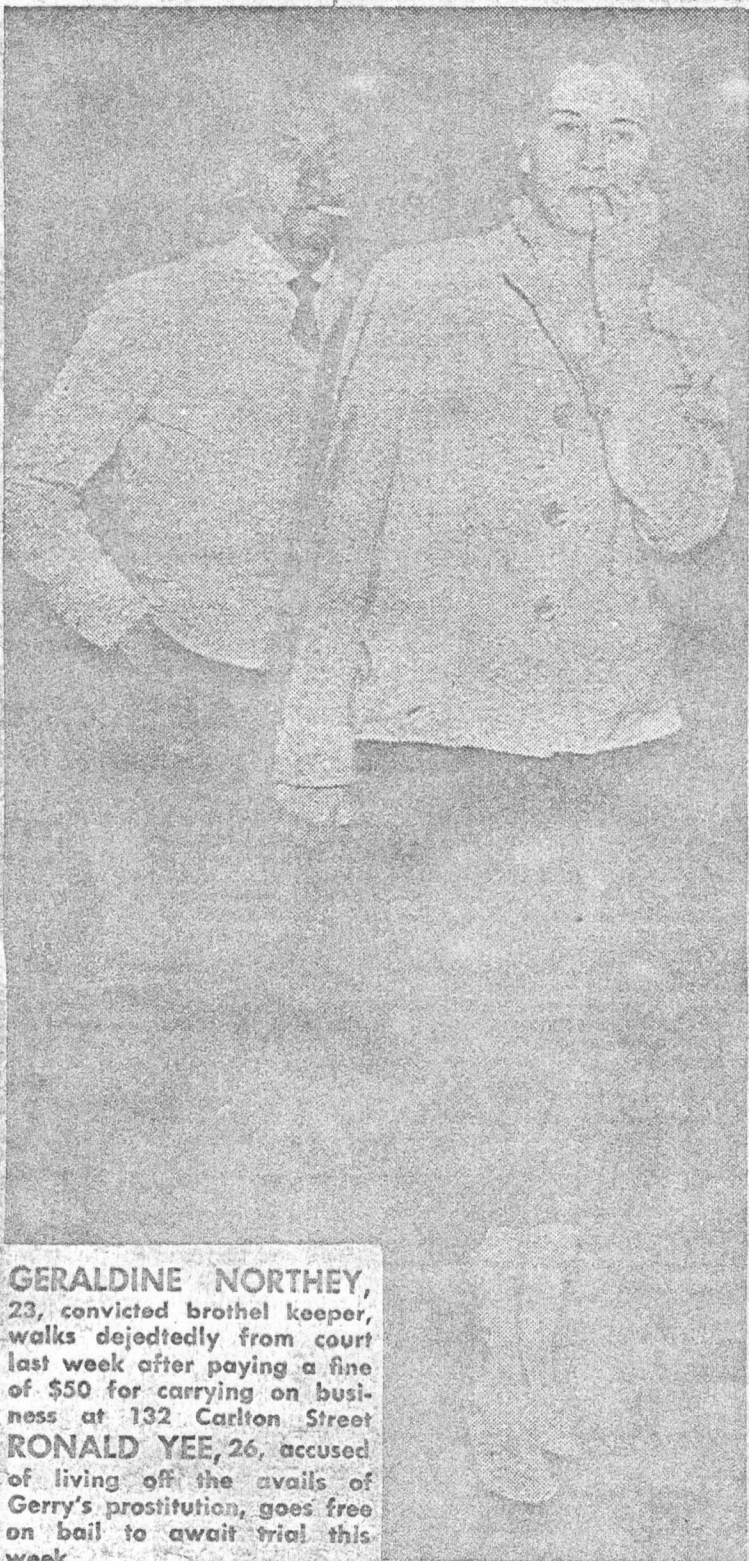

JEAN WAH, 37, Toronto hustler married to a Chinese, last week was convicted by Toronto Magistrate Gullen of keeping a bawdy house at 247 Dundas St. East. There was slight confusion when the court mistook Yee Yan Yang, an elderly Chinese woman who owns the property, for the accused, but after a verbal hassle that sounded like rush-hour at a chop suey joint, Wah was ushered off to do 30 days at the Don Jail.

MINES GOING ON?

MINING DISTRICT: They still keep coming! The Big Boys and the small ones, but mostly the in-between fellows. They come singly, they come in teams, and they come in groups. No matter how they come, they are there to explore, to survey, to drill, to sink shafts, and eventually to develop new mines.

We heard on this last to you before and we shall repeat it again. Do not get a lot of stock in one company, but spread yourself thin over the field. Better select one company from a team or several than a few groups. To aid you in your choice, we have selected a number of companies that are currently active on various mining fronts and have sufficient funds on hand to do the preliminary exploration of their respective properties.

In the Timmins region have come three brand new companies: Jameson acquired four groups of claims scattered through the Timmins, Jumbo and Macdonald Twp. Kahle Copper (an exploration) holds ground in same area.

Mid-Chibougamau, an old-time mining zone and trading on the Canadian Stock Exchange, entered the race by taking 18 claims in Beaune Twp. Beaune company holds 47 claims south of Romanet Lake, Quebec, on which drilling is in progress. Jack Watts, a junior company in the Timmins area, is negotiating property deals in the Timmins and in its own account. The low for the stock this year was 18¢ and now 16¢. The stock was promoted to a high of 60¢ in 1965; and now 16¢.

United Macle, associated with A. W. White group of companies, optioned 18 claims in Loveland Twp. Low for the year was 18¢ and a high of 22¢. The stock is in a technical position to advance from current price of 20¢ on encouraging news from the field. A group of companies (associated with Leu Cadecky interests) are offering their resources to operate six drilling rigs on the Timmins property in the financial time of approximately one million bucks. Here is a listing in choice from: North American Rare Metals, Mistango, Old Lake Silver, Silver Miller, Silver Town, Patricia Silver, Patash Mines, Bonnie Copper and Gull Lake Iron Mines.

From the miners for further news. Meanwhile, we give our nod to Wag C.

WILSON LAKE REGION: Let not the hustle-bustle of one mining operation obscure your vision as to the possibilities elsewhere. While all activity is concentrated in Timmins, a number of large mining companies are quietly staking claims in the Bachelor Lake and Senneterre areas of Quebec, where a copper showing was discovered last winter.

Cooperation was first to take option on choice ground. Kerr and Naranda acquired adjoining ground. The J. M. Boylen and his companies, Omigax, Grandroy, Northern Canada, Isa, and Wend, followed the path into the area. More about developments in due time.

NEKA EXPLORATIONS holds 20 claims in Tillemont Twp. in the same area, where a magnetometer survey is being carried out. This company is working on its silver property located in the Lake Simcoe, Georgiana, Ontario. Currently trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange around 30¢, the stock is poised for a price advance in event that exploratory surveys uncover the kind of mineralization in the field crew hopes to find.

SEADWAY RED LAKE — sister to Coulée Lead — is starting to drill on its property in Jordet-Purrier area. Company also staked 50 claims in Sakana Lake district, Quebec. Additionally, some ground is recently acquired in Beaune Twp., Timmins. Coulée Lead was mentioned in our preceding column. Both of these stocks stand a fair chance in advance in price from their current trading level of 20¢ and 18¢ respectively, provided that field work results will give the sponsors nothing to crow about.

Two penny stocks brought to your attention as good speculative bets are also moved up in price — Genex rose to a high of 30¢, Albion Consolidated touched 37¢. Both offered quick profits in event of 200 percent.

We shall attempt to answer questions through this column, submitted by our readers on any stock in which they have a personal interest and/or other aspects of the stock market in general.

PERFECT DEFENCE FOR 'VAG C.' CHARGE

One must see it to believe it. The statue would bring teenage from any male lover of the body building cult, while the size of a tennis ball and looked as if it had been subjected to the treatment in a men's barbershop. The stocky legs meanwhile, looked anxious to escape the confinement of male trousers. And this was up for Vagrancy "C" — peddling female charms?

Her name is Patricia G. Kelly and she pleaded not guilty to the charge. Detective Joseph Farraday told the court that he had observed the accused since February 14, while she was in the company of known prostitutes. Allegedly she admitted being a common prostitute to the detective on two occasions. But he didn't think this was sufficient evidence of this kind of person. Kelly seemed to frequent the company of Norma MacDougall, 25, who was sentenced to 60 days in prison on a Vag "C" charge.

When the evidence for the Crown was completed Attorney Kevin Jones asked the accused to stand. She told the court that she had lived in that area for 10 years and that she frequently talked to people she knew, men and women.

Mr. Jones, who conducted his questioning rather hesitantly — it seemed he tried to ascertain whether the magistrate was impressed with the replies or not — then asked the accused about the medical examination to which the accused was subjected in the Don Jail.

Kelly told the court that she told the doctor at the jail that she was a virgin. She said they didn't believe it but when examining her they found it to be true. (Kelly maintained that she worked for the Chinese Recreation Centre). She also stated that she has never had anything to do with men in her life and never went out with them.

She told the court that she lied to the police about being a common prostitute because she wanted to get them off her back. Earlier, Detective Farraday had stated that on one occasion Kelly had replied to his inquiries: "So what, I'm hustling my — for a buck." In court Kelly denied the truth of this statement.

Magistrate Tupper-Bigelow was reluctant to go into an argument as to whether a woman can be a prostitute and still be a virgin. Obviously more definition is required in the Criminal Code.

The case against Patricia Kelly was dismissed.

Saved Skin By Saying Nothing

The sole reason why the charge of Vag "C" against Ruth Harkness, alias Wong, was dismissed is because she never said anything to the questioning detectives. She simply kept quiet when they asked her what she was doing at that time of night in the Chinatown area. Another "sensible" thing she did was plead not guilty to the charge.

Constable Farrel gave evidence in this case. He took his time relating the various occasions he had observed the accused loitering around the Queen and Bathurst Sts. area, talking to various men. His notes seemed to be incomplete so he told his story relying on his memory.

Several times during his testimony he tried to tell the court what the men to whom the accused had spoken had told him. But Magistrate Tupper-Bigelow wouldn't allow these statements as evidence before he had not made sure that the accused had confirmed them to be true. The detective had to agree that she had not admitted to the truth of these statements. Consequently these statements were not allowed as evidence.

In effect the Crown's case boiled down to various observations the detective and his colleagues had made about the movements of the accused. Obviously this was not sufficient to convict somebody of prostitution. Even when Mrs. Harkness, who is married and has two children, was asked to give a good account of herself, she merely said that she wanted to go home.

Detective Farrel seemed to think that this was an admission of guilt. Magistrate Bigelow disagreed with him.

'Lesbians' Overflow Chinatown

Make Passes At Yonge St. Lasses

The scattered sisterhood of Sappho has found a happy hunting ground in Toronto's Chinatown, where they have fashioned a modern Isle of Lesbos, thus combining two ancient cultures in a blend that sadly enough contains little of Confucius and Plato but plenty of the off-beat sex lore of ancient Greece and the poppy dreams of the forbidden city of Peking.

A "He-She" Meet

Although the majority of Lesbians have little use for men in the sexual sense, males serve a useful purpose as meal tickets—and that is where aging, well-heeled Chinese enter the picture.

Numerous notorious "Butch Broads"—as they are called by the tribe—are "common-law" mates of Chinatown merchants, chefs, etc., and uncommon mates of softly feminine chicks who act as "wives" for the Butches.

The Chinese "protectors" also come in handy in supplying the "fix" money for the Butches, many of whom are drug addicts. It costs six dollars for a fix—and that ain't hay. Especially now with the diluted stuff. The average person on junk needs from six to twelve fixes a day.

So many Lesbians reside on Elm Street and the surrounding neighborhood in Chinatown that female clerks in the nearby Yonge Street stores say the Butches make more passes at them than do playboys.

Take a stroll in the area some day and you can observe Butches dressed in mannish attire, sporting short haircuts, and resembling a football tackle more than a member of the weaker sex. Their main hangout is the Continental Hotel on Elizabeth Street, but a secondary headquarters is developing in the ladies' beverage room of the plush Westbury Hotel, according to current, reliable reports.

The term Lesbians, as you know, derives from the Isle of Lesbos, where Sappho, the ancient Greek poetess, established a colony of the mannish sisterhood. Sappho was a raving beauty, it made her raving mad when a man tried to roll her in the hay. She was too beautiful to kill, so the Greeks banished her and her converts to the island—after all, being philosophers, the Athenians reasoned there were plenty of other women around.

It is not known for sure who banished the Toronto Lesbians to Chinatown, but there they are, as plentiful as chow mein and sweet and sour spareribs.

While Butch Lesbians hate men, they have one thing in common with them—they sure as hell like women. Any Metro morality policeman can tell you of cases where Lesbians act as pimps for their weaker sisters. Any police court reporter can tell you, too, and that's why you're reading this.

In court for various offences in the past few years have been a Lesbian who had a foot-long knife concealed in her brassiere, one who listed her profession as "machinist", another who specializes in tearing toilet tissue dispensers from the wall with her bare hands, not only in restaurant washrooms but in women's cells in police stations. Other oddities too numerous to list were equally bizarre.

The girls who play the passive role in a Lesbian ménage are hours of another color, figuratively speaking—their skin can be any shade, as long as it is pliable. In every arrangement you must have opposites, like ham and eggs, corn beef and cabbage, etc. Butches go for the same type of dainty dolls that most men prefer.

The tough Butch broads who are supported by solvent Chinese "husbands" overcome their distaste of having passes made at them by a man, by dreaming of the passes they themselves will later make at their own "wives". Never a dull moment.

Oddly enough, the only "men" an active Lesbian enjoys for company are the limp wrist lads of the lavender set. Here, too, the Lesbian acts more like the aggressor, conversationally or otherwise. However, an affair like this presents a problem. It can best be described by the following limerick dreamed up by a CBC odd-ball who understandably waives a credit line—and brother, how CBC types love credit lines as a rule:

"There was a young homo named Bloom.
Who had a Lesbian up in his room.
They fought all the night
To see which had the right
To do what, with what, and to whom."

What makes a Lesbian? That is another story. It has intrigued psychiatrists and philosophers for centuries. Their theories will be explained in a future issue. You could write a book about it!

LIVE & LAUGH

YOO-HOO!

Old Lady: "Well, little man, do you have a fairy godfather?"
Youngster: "No, but we've got an uncle we're keeping an eye on."

SURPRISED

A young lady was invited up to her boss's apartment to look at his etchings. When they arrived at his apartment she was surprised to find no etchings. In fact, to her amazement, she discovered he had no chairs, no tables, on chesterfield, no furniture at all.
She was floored.

NO THIEF

Hotel manager to house detective: "Did you find any of our towels in that salesman's suitcase?"
Dick: "No, but I found one of our chambermaids in his grip."

Shacks-Up With Tenderloin Doll

Dun and Bradstreet Faces Morals Charge

A routine investigation of a prostitute, Claire Bisaillon, led morality officers to her home at 42 Isabella Street, Toronto, Apartment 306, and they were somewhat surprised when the door was answered by a man who identified himself as James Alexander Rose.

Questioned as to his relationship tioned re the consequences of living off the avails of prostitution.

During subsequent weeks, Claire Bisaillon again came under observation by morality officers and was arrested in the St. Regis Hotel after soliciting a plainclothesman. At her trial she pleaded guilty and it was learned that she was still living with Rose on Isabella St.

al was that of the arresting officers, John Leybourne and Thomas Stewart.

After the magistrate decided that the Crown had established a prima facie case, Rose was committed to trial by a higher court.

The defence then called Ben Nichols, superintendent of the apartment building at 42 Isabella
